to serious objections. We know of but period of his imprisonment must have one point in this State where the judge is so elected and satisfaction exists, and that is at Burlington. And the fact that the people there are contented with the system has depended more upon the locality than upon the method. The judgeship has been the farthest removed from the field of politics of any office in the city; the better class of people of all parties uniting to sustain the upright judge when assailed at the polls. In this manner has Judge Haselton, who is a Democrat, been continued in office at Burlington year after year by the aid of Republican votes. On one occasion, years ago, his party refused one occasion, years ago, his party refused to renominate him and attempted his de-feat by its political machinery, but the Democratic manipulators were themselves defeated almost beyond recognition. that city the judges understand that the tenure of office depends upon "good behaviour" rather than upon the favor of schemers and the fortunes of political parties. But in this instance Burlington forms the exception and not the rule.—St. Albans Messenger.

Obituary.

Died in Essex, Jan. 15th, Lorenzo D. Whitcomb, aged 71 years. Mr. Whitcomb was born in Richmond and named after the celebrated Lorenzo Dow, and spent his minority in the town of his birth. After his majority he lived there and in the neighboring towns for several years, working at farming with good success single handed, until he had accumulated enough to warrant him in taking a wife and making a home of his own. and making a home of his own. At the age of 42 he married Miss Cornelia, daughter of Blossom Goodrich of Richmond, and lived there and in Bolton and Jericho respectively, for a few years, and then bought and moved on to the River farm, about a mile from Essex Junction. There he has lived for the last 19 years, being very successful and accumulating a handsome property, his dairy of 110 cows furnishing in part milk for the city of Burlington. He was a good man, an able financier, sound in counsel, and will be greatly missed by his neighbors and a large circle of relatives and friends. His wife died four years ago, and since that time, and for some time previous, his health has been on the dedecline and for the last year he has expected death at any time. But he was ready and prepared and arranged all his worldly affairs to that end. He leaves three children, two sons and a daughter. three children, two sons and a daughter. His funeral was attended Tuesday from his late home where a large procession followed him to the place and monument he had himself prepared in the beautiful cemetery at Essex Junction.

Dr. Selson Arrested by United States

Dr. Nelson of Lancaster, bank notoriety was arrested in Boston at the Conservatory of Music Saturday by a United States officer on the charge of aiding and abetting in the robbery of the wrecked bank. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Hallet who fixed the amount of his ball at $10,000. He succeeded in securing that sum late Saturday night and was released.

Evidence in the cases of Nelson, McNeili and Veo will be laid before the grand jury at Worcester, Mass., to-day. The prosecuting officers claim that they will be able to show, by conclusive testimony, which has not yet been made public, that Dr. Nelson was the leader in arranging to rob the bank, and that the plan was formed a considerable time before it was carried out. There is also said to be document. and was released. out. There is also said to be document-ary evidence that Nelson contemplated flight for several days before his arrest, and the presence of McNeil's personal pa-pers in the hidden satchels was for a defi-nite purpose, which will be made plain when the case is all in.

McNelll's Whereabouts

While in Canada last week J. N. Kellogg thinks he saw McNeill, the absconding bank president, says the Rutland Herold. Kellogg took the train at St. Johns for Vermont and met a person who was very much interested in the story of the robbery and asked particularly about the hunt for McNeill and the affairs of the marble company. After getting all the information about the West Rutland quarry Mr. Kellogg could give him the stranger said: "Well, I don't know anything about marble, I am in the iron business." The stranger had a new fur coat and was talking about the price he had paid for a new gun. He got off at a small station and said that he was going hunting, which seemed improbable as there was a blinding storm in progress. Mr. Kellogg took pains to notice the man's features, which he thinks correspond exactly with the description of him, although his beard had apparently been freshly shaved. ing bank president, says the Rutland

Gov. Smith and the Boston and Lowell Line.

A FREE PRESS representative had an interview with Gov. Smith Tuesday at St. Albans relative to the Montreal despatch appearing in the morning papers to the effect that the Central Vermont had effected a lease of the Boston and Lowell road. Gov. Smith said: "The rumor is agreat a surpise to me as to anyone else and the despatch in the morning papers was the first intimation I received that such a report was in circulation. I cannot account for the story and have no knowledge as to the origin of the have no knowledge as to the origin of the rumor. You can deny the truth of the report in a most emphatic manner. It is purely sensational in its character, and has no more foundation in fact than the canard recently telegraphed from Toronto that the Central Vermont had been leased to the Grand Trunk. There is not the remotest probability of either the Central Vermont leasing the Lowell road or of the Grand Trunk securing control of the Central Vermont." A report was circulated a year ago that negotiations were in progress between the Central Vermont and the Boston and Lowell for the lease of the latter road to the former. This last rumor may be only a revival of the former report.
